

Abstract

Title:

Demand for difficult available sports for the Czech Republic in university courses for example on wave surfing.

Objectives:

In the theoretical part I introduced surfing on a wave as one of the difficult available sports for the Czech Republic and surf camps in general. The practical part is based on a survey conducted among students of UK FTVS, where was ascertained interest among students and under what conditions would such a course organized by UK FTVS.

Methods:

In the bachelor thesis are mainly used methods of analysis, induction, deduction, synthesis and the method of questioning. Chosen method is research available sources of information regarding surfing on a wave and their personal long-term experience in this sport. Research is conducted through a survey consisting of 18 questions. Questions are asked so as to give them clearly identify the requirements of students in elective courses surfing on a wave.

The results:

Individual results of survey questions are handled in the charts. The results show that the students of FTVS UK have ever surfed the wave in the past and what conditions would suit them most. The results can also be read, what was the approximate age of the respondents, their field of study and gender. Finally, I summarize the results and present the appearance, under what circumstances would such a course, according to respondents' answers should look like.

Keywords:

Surfing – demand – college courses